

DID YOU KNOW?

 A mother pig is called a sow.

 A baby pig is called a piglet.

 A family of piglets is called a litter.

 A father pig is called a boar.

 Farrow is the act of a sow giving birth to a piglet.

 Farrowing crates are where all piglets are born.

FARROWING CRATES

Farrowing crates are where all piglets are born, this is an image of one of our crates with a pregnant sow in it. In her crate, she has access to feed, constant water. There is also a heat mat, and heat lamp for her soon to arrive piglets. The crate is designed to give the sow adequate space to move but limit her ability to harm the piglets by laying on them. Her piglets have their own space to nurse off of their mother. This space also allows the piglets to lay down safely and out of the way for their mother .

